THAT IS WHAT THE STAID OLD CITY HAS BECOME.

Leader of the Cult a Woman-Some of Her Fents Very Remarkable-College Professors and Physicians Interested.

The New York Herald says that Phila-delphia is a veritable hotbed of hypnotism. staid old city, over which William Penn casts his benign countenance from his lofty perch atop the great marble city hall, has developed a strange mania for the study and practice of the occult science, if so it may be called. Noted surgeons have not only become converts to hypnotism, but almost daily employ it in their work.

The most remarkable member of this cultifor it really amounts to a cult in Philadelphia—is Mrs, K. D. S. Armbruster. Recently in the presence of the Quaker city's leading psychological authorities, she performed a feat in hypnotism which proved her remarkable powers to be little less than supernatural. A man and a woman were both hypnotized by Mrs. Armbruster, who succeeded in accomplishing a feat in pletorially descriptive telepathy. The subjects were Edward Simmonds and a Mrs. M. D. S. Armbruster was formerly Miss Kiemet Guyer. Never but once has she been hypnotized, but she has since possessed a wonderful hypnotic power over others. She is looked upon with something akin to reverence, not unmixed with awe, by those who have witnessed and bear testimony to her strange power.

The first and only person who ever hypnotized Mrs. Armbruster was Michael kegrize, Jr., who is professor of music at Ogontz seminary, the fashionable school for young ladies, and which was formerly the country residence of Jay Cooke in his paimy days. Kegrize wields tremendous magnetic power over his pupils, and his great success as a teacher of piano playing is said to be due to this Eight years ago he hypnotized Mrs. Armbruster and communicated to her the post-hypnotic suggestion that she would never afterward be hypnotized by any one eise.

The strain of concentration of her own over and resistance against the power of others has naturally had its effect upon her persons sweaten Somnamhulage has has developed a strange mania for the study and practice of the occult science, if

The strain of concentration of her own power and resistance against the power of others has naturally had its effect upon her nervous system. Somnambulism has resulted and on more than one occasion she has been found walking the streets of Philadelphia in the dead of night, her eyes wide and staring, but her mind wrapped in the oblivion of deep sleep. A newspaper reporter once encountered her at 2 o'clock in the morning, clad only in a silken nightrobe, which was drenched from a pelting storm of rain and sleet. He called a cab and took her to her home in a state of hysteria.

The latest achievement in hypnotism of this strange being occurred when the successful experiment in mental telepathy recorded above was made. On this occasion there were present Dr. Max Bockrock, assistant clinical professor in nervous diseases at Jefferson Medical college; Dr. Dickinson Sergeant Miller, professor of metaphysics and psychology at Bryn Mawr college for women; Dr. William S. Walsworth, assistant professor of physiology at the University of Pennsylvania, and Dr. S. Millington Miller, expert in brain science.

Mrs. Armbruster caused Mrs. Joynes, while in a deep trance, to send to Simmonds an image of a daisy. No one in the room knew what mental message was to be sent. She whispered the name into the ears of Mrs. Joynes, who at once, by her expression, seemed to be exerting every fiber of her being in her telepathic lask.

Simmonds was told that he was to re-by her expression, seemed to be exerting every fiber of her being in her telepathic fask.

Simmonds was told that he was to receive a message, and was commanded to describe his mental conception of it as it grew. He said at once that it was a flower. "It is white," he murmured, "white, with many petals—and a yellow heart." At last, after a supreme effort, he comprehended fully the image in his mind and said it was a daisy.

HE SAW ST. PAUL'S.

Returned Traveler Failed to See the Latin Quarter-He Didn't Care for Old Coins. From the Washington Star.

"We didn't miss anything at all," said the man with the side whiskers and a broad band around his silk hat. "Not a thing. band around his silk hat. "Not a thing. Our party had the money, and we had the time, and we said that so long as if had taken some of us a good many years to get to Europe, we were going to take our time about coming away. I tell you, gentlemen, for one solid year I haven't done a thing but improve my mind. I wouldn't have missed seeing St. Paul's for anything. Just think of it! There's a cathedral 500 feet long and 255 feet high. It was a long trip to take, but it isn't every man who can say he has seen a cathedral 500 feet long and 255 feet high, and we saw a lot of interesting things. I am going through the guidebooks and learn all about a number of them by heart. Ah, gentlemen, I tell you it is an impressive thing to stand under the chadow of a cathedral 500 feet long and 355 feet high."

"You spent some time in Paris, of course."

The tourist hesitated.
"No." he answered, reluctantly. "I left all that sort of thing to a young friend of mine, who was making a collection. To tell you the honest truth, I never did take much interest in old coins, anyhow."

BELGIAN HOUSEKEEPING.

Why Servants and Waiters of That Land Excel-Educated for Their Work.

A writer in the New York Mail and Ex-press declares that Belgian servants and waiters are noted for their excellence. waiters are noted for their excellence. They are never in want of employment, and are as eagerly sought for by experienced housekeepers in New York as in Brussels itself. The secret, according to a distinguished scholar of New York who has studied the daily life of that country, is to be found in what are known as housekeeping schools. These have long been established, and are considered a necessity by young men and women who desire to enter the calling mentioned. The scholars are educated in groups of ten, this having been found to be the best number for obtaining the highest proficiency on the part of the pupils. Arrangement is made whereby a girl can study for a week, and then work for a week or more and then again resume her education. and then again resume her education. The tens are also broken into other tens The tens are also broken into other tens in order to accustom each scholar to the sensation, or necessity, of making new acquaintances all the time, and at the same time to prevent their losing the spirit of rivalry with which they begin their work. At the end of one year the scholars are very proficient. The girls are taken from 12 to 18, while the boys are taken at a later age. Besides cooking, marketing and housekeeping, there are special instructions in regard to clothing, heating, house repairing and other matters of domestic economy.

MISSED A GOOD THING.

Why General Buckner Failed to Attend the Aztec Club Dinner.

General S. B. Buckner, at a great personal inconvenience, went all the way from Kentucky to attend the annual banquet of the Aztec Club at Sherry's. General Buckner is the president of the club, and he expected to have a good time. He arrived at the Fifth Avenue hotel and, as he had plenty of leisure on hand, made himself comfortable. He entertained ex-Secreary Carlisle, who is also a guest of the Fifth Avenue, on the rosy outlook for Hindman and "Simon-pure" Democracy in Kentucky. He smoked his cob pipe with the greatest contentment as he thought of the surprisingly large vote Hindman would poll next month.

Then the general retired late, as is his custom, at peace with all the world. He ner is the president of the club, and he ex-

Then the general retired late, as is his custom, at peace with all the world. He went down to breakfast about 9 o'clock next morning, and, as he passed into the dining room, purchased a morning paper. After ordering his breakfast he glanced over the paper and was horrlied to see that the Aztec Club's dinner had come off. He had made a mistake of one day in the date.

off. He had made a mistake of one day in the date.

General Buckner, however, does not allow such trifles to affect him, and he made up for the loss of a good dinner by eating a substantial breakfast. He was a little bit put out, however, to think that he had gone so far to attend a dinner, was on the ground, and still got left.
